IV. Executive Committee Meeting with Mayor Indya Kincannon

VanDyke, Executive Committee Chair reported the meeting with Mayor Kincannon went very well. The Mayor indicated she was on board with the recommendations presented by CODI. Mayor Kincannon shared several ideas with the executive committee to advance the purpose of CODI. Conversations were centered around the Disability Friendly Survey, Livability, need for affordable accessible housing, Community Engagement including increasing CODI’s presence in the community, the ADA Transition Plan, and Disability Services Office Expansion.

Disability Friendly Survey
VanDyke explained to Mayor Kincannon the survey went through multiple iterations to ensure its validity and was created by experts in the field. VanDyke emphasized the need for additional help with promoting, monitoring, and disseminating the survey.

Livability and the need for Affordable Accessible Housing
VanDyke provided Mayor Kincannon disability statics. Reporting half of individuals in Knoxville over the age of 75 have a disability. This number is growing daily due to the baby boomer population and advanced medical technology. Making this generation politically and socially active making up a large voting block and adding to the numbers of people with disabilities. Mayor Kincannon talked about universal design and how it impacts everybody including people with disabilities.

VanDyke discussed the issue of affordable and accessible housing is a major hurdle in Knoxville. CODI contacted several community resource agencies including the O’Connor Center and most agencies listed affordable and accessible housing as a barrier in Knoxville. We also discussed the need for elevators in certain multi-family communities in order to provide more accessible housing. Accessible housing is not a low-income only issue, its an issue period. Mayor Kincannon spoke about the possibility of engaging contractors when building new complexes that a certain percentage are accessible and where elevators may be needed, encourage installation and let the developer figure out how et to get it done. Also, how do we engage contractors to see the potential to meet these needs (grants/funding?). Training and information are also needed for contractors to understand the huge demand of affordable and accessible housing.

Community Engagement Increasing CODI Presence in the community
VanDyke reported we can no longer just rely on a digital footprint. Most of the target population we serve cannot get online or don’t have the resources to get online. Cognitive barriers and/or other age-related issues also pose as barriers for using technology. Mayor Kincannon was onboard with paper mailouts and a monthly newsletter on what CODI is doing including resources for this population.

Mayor Kincannon suggested incorporating Zoom meetings as an option for people to attend the CODI meetings. CODI can still meet face to face in the future but mixing it up may be a way to increase public awareness and attendance. Zoom meetings does allow more people to participate in a safer environment due to COVID.

ADA Transition Plan & Disability Services Office Expansion
VanDyke reported there was nothing in the transition plan addressing sidewalks. People who cannot walk very well/seniors and people using strollers and motorized wheelchairs are also impacted. Mayor Kincannon recommended a representative from CODI make a request to speak at next week’s City Council Meeting in relation to funding of a sidewalk project and how it positively impacts people with disabilities.

VanDyke informed Mayor Kincannon the ADA Transition Plan was not viewable online for the general public to read. CODI did not have the complete ADA Transition Plan to review.

VanDyke addressed the need of expanding the ADA/Disability Services Office. Unfortunately, the Mayor was unable to make a commitment to expanding the Disability Services Office. However, the conservation laid the groundwork for the possibly of revisiting this subject when the budget is less restrictive. VanDyke proposed we meet with the mayor at least twice a year, Mayor Kincannon was open to the idea.
